My life long dream has been to be able to be apart of a Skate team. I have had a few sponsors in the past but never lasted due to the company i was always fully decidacted to my sponsors it was never nothing i did to loose it. My goals is to have a photographer whenever i need also get a board a month. i always had a hard time getting a filmer who is willing to help me produce the best content possible also i would like to maybe attend a future contest i had attended a few in the past i recently just missed a contest due to me not having a filmer so of my others is to build a skate park in my back yard once i get the blueprints and the equipment nessesary. It will just feel good being apart of something. Some of the achievements i feel that i obtain is that i have became notice by the skateshops and the skateparks of greenville I managed to get a complete and a few back ups nike sb skatebag and skateshoes plus wax. My challenges is put out a full street part and get a filmer.

*Dad - What are your dreams?
Xander - to be a skateboarder.*

*Dad - What are your goals?
Xander - stand on the starboard going down hills.*

*Dad - what are your achievements?
Xander - what are achievements?
Dad- Achievements are goals you have accomplished.
Xander - Um going down that little hill on the skateboard.*

*Dad - What are your challenges?
Xander - Going down a big hill.....
How much more of this is there?
Dad - you're done Cap. I love you.
Xander - I love you too!*

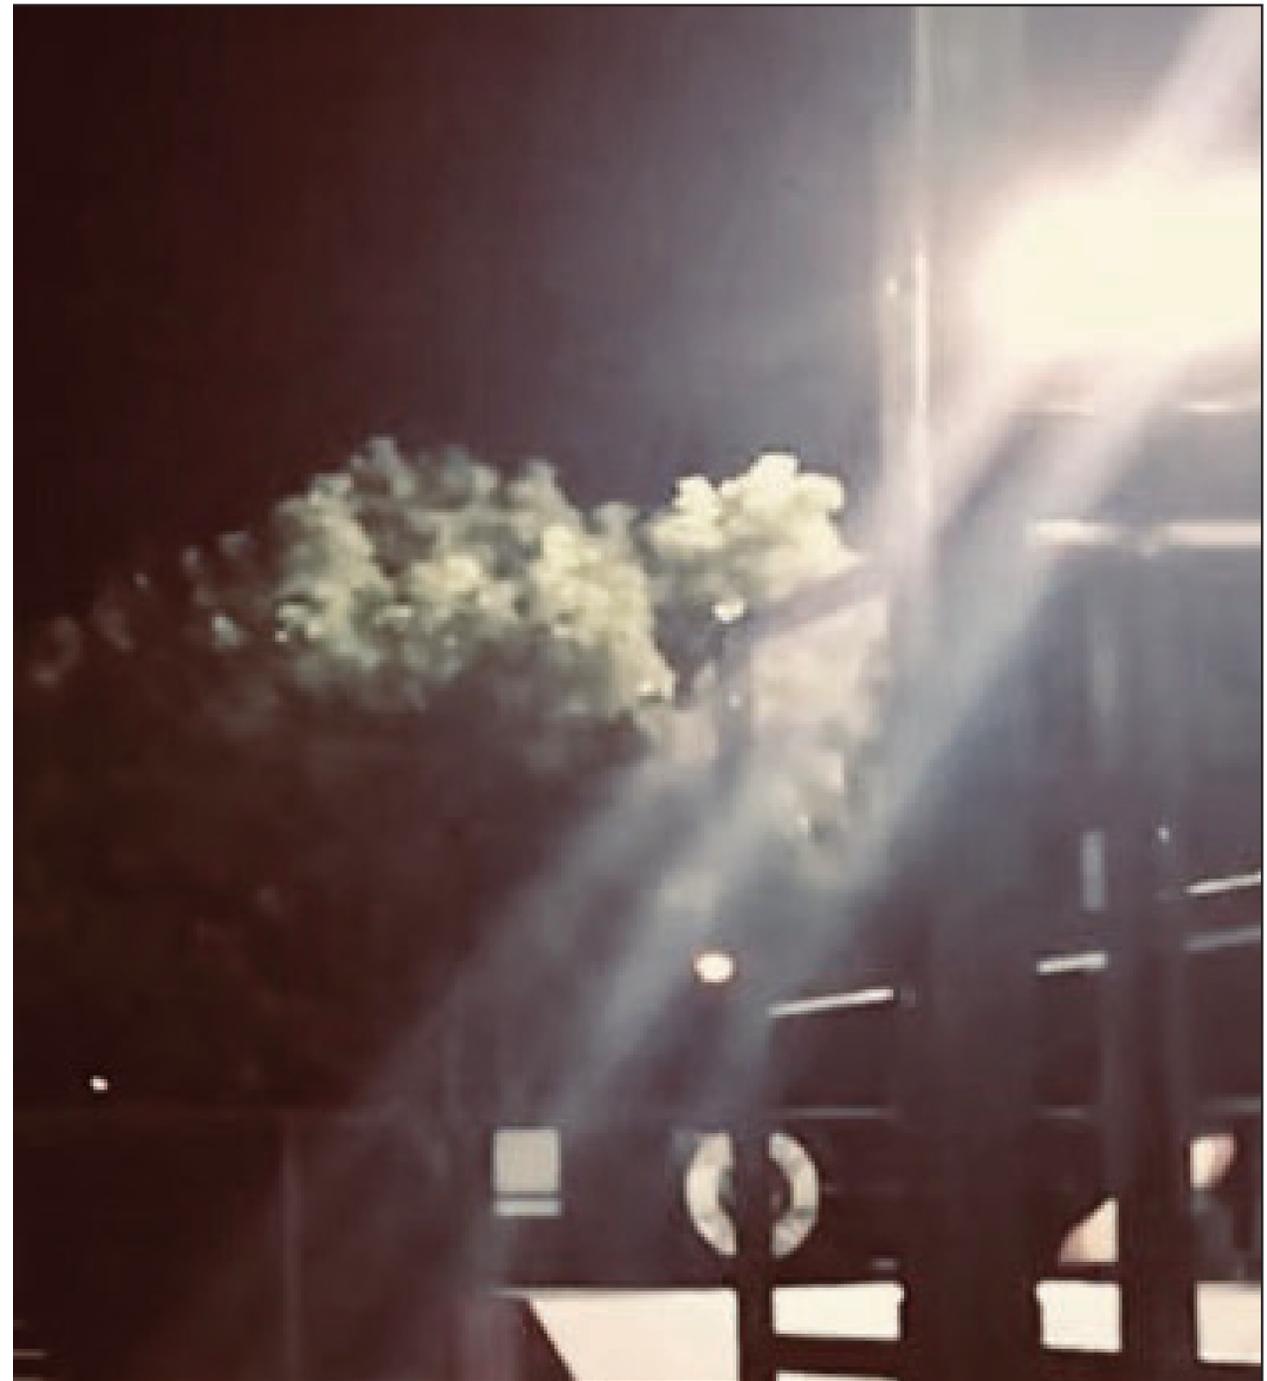

Alex St Cyr

Alex stcyr has lived in hammond most of his life when he was a baby he had so many problems. He is high functioning autistic and he has seizures But he has never let it get him down. it's hard for him with people being so mean and picking on him but he keeps his head up and lives life to the fullest. He has been skateboarding at dreamland skatepark in hammond Louisiana since he was 4 alex just wants everyone to see that it dont matter if you are different you can do anything if you put your heart in it and never give up..

Got back after 20 plus years of not skateboarding, less tricks, more Bruce's but the same rush and enjoyment on every turn... specially now that I can share skateboarding with my kids. Don't stop skating, ride it hard, ride it fast and keep ripping!!!!

My Dream is to be at the Olympics to watch our sport grow and be recognized on the global stage, and skate the course. I've achieved an abundance as far as skateboarding goes from progression travelling and sponsorships, Business friendships.

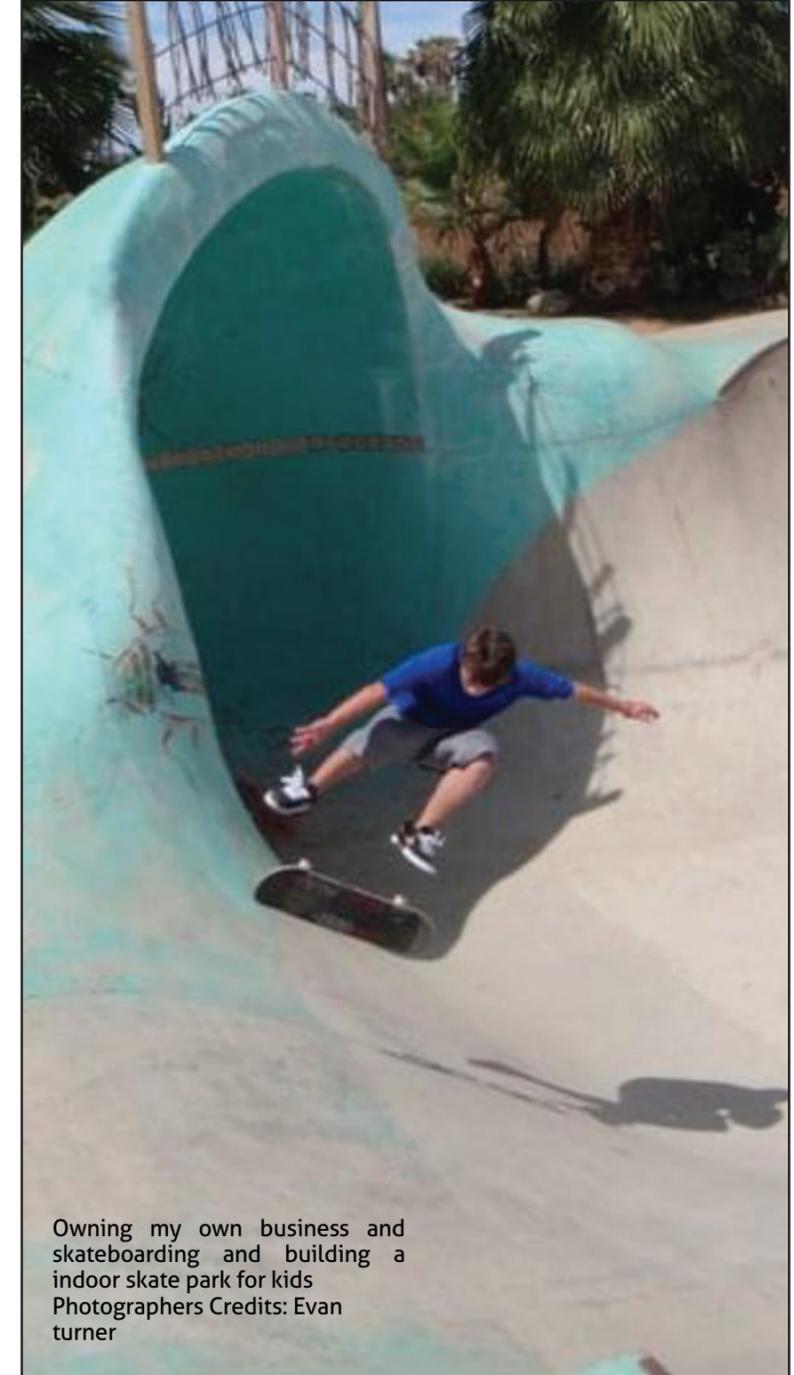

I've designed 2 skateparks worked with the youth for an skateboard community for 25 years providing events and clinics private lessons, camps and workshops. I've worked directly with my community on a political scale with many senators mayors and councilmen and women to get parks built and designed by skateboarders. The challenges have been many from injuries to running a skateboard company, learning a new trick or going to the next level as far as height and distance are concerned.

What we do as skateboarders an artist is get back up and do it again until you are fulfilled and completely satisfied with the trick's or lines you have been working on to succeed and land.

In the beginning, everything started out so much different from now. Everyone could do everything I couldn't... But it wasn't long before i made that change! My job was to learn everything someone else couldn't. I tried every trick no one could do just to get better and believe it or not it worked for me. It isn't always going to work the way you want but you have to learn a way for it to work for you.

No one else has your style and that's what my biggest challenge was. I was too worried people wouldn't like the way i did my tricks. But i'm not worried anymore because i love the things i can do on my board.

Skateboarding always challenges me every time I'm practicing, always keeping focused when performing the maneuvers, imagining even before I hit it, and always keeping the maneuvers perfect, and this I take to my life, thank you skateboard and friends Photographers Credits: Ok

I've been skateboarding and snowboarding for over 8+years, grew a strong passion for it at a young age and always had my mom take me to the skatepark as a kid. Held onto it throughout growing up with the neighbourhood kids we all would build stuff in our driveways out of anything we had and as we got older we tried more and more. Then started going to the skateparks again and spent a lot of years getting hurt, almost gave up the sport.. quit for a year and then got back into from the influence of friends saying I should skate again. Started progressing really fast 2nd time around and got good so it made me strive to do better and better and now I'm at the skateparks everyday and learning new tricks everyday. There's nothing I love more than these sports, they keep me learning and keep me hyped up! Forever a boarder.

Not in this for anything but to enjoy skateboarding and let others know to follow there dreams no matter what they choose I never thought I would be as good as I think I am therefore I will get better just practice when I can as far as goals I honestly wanted to be pro but now it's more the enjoyment of the sport I challenge myself every day I choose a trick in my head and try it when I land this it's the best feeling ever that I could picture this and land it it's a ongoing process and it's made me good as far as achievement I've learned some of my favorite tricks and more to come most important do what you love and do it with respect no other way to grow I do this cuz it's my life in a way getting on the board makes everything else disappear just surfing the pavement

Nicholas E. Oberle

I've grown up in just about every small town in Kansas. When you live in a small town, like great bend, Kansas, or greensburg, Kansas, there is no place that is sacred for skating. So you gotta find your own, this makes it incredibly hard to be able to compete with other skaters in bigger cities that have access to that. All knowing that has done, is push me even harder to the point I can not only keep up, but keep them stoked! It's all about having fun and working hard while doing it.

My dream is not to make it big in skating but to live a modest fulfilling life while using the sport for mental and physical therapy. My goal is to help expand the world of skating for everyone to enjoy all styles and walks of life also to open up a board shop. I dont have many achievements honestly im just proud to be able to spread love everywhere i can. My hardest challenge was overcoming being homeless and living in the slums of fresno its so hot and dangerous out here ot almost makes me hate the city but then i see the people of the community struggling together and it makes me happy the unity is beautiful.
